

Norm Webb is an award-winning apiarist, whose hive maintenance and honey have won blue ribbons and other awards at the Sydney Royal Easter Show for many years. Norm notes that bee colonies have collapsed in parts of Europe and the USA. He says that Australia doesn't yet have the problems of the northern hemisphere, though we still need to be careful in preserving and maintaining the different varieties of bees we have. Norm has been keeping bees for 30 years and he will speak from a wealth of experience and knowledge about ways we can support bees in our gardens. His talk will be timely as spring-time is the time when bees should appear in large numbers in our gardens.
